Set up production error monitoring

Regardless how well we have tested our application, there will always be errors on the production server. To get notified of production errors so you can respond to them, you need to set up an error monitoring service on production.

Go ahead and install Sentry from here: https://getsentry.com/welcome/. There's a trial plan that you can use.

You also need to install the "sentry-raven" gem in your app: https://github.com/getsentry/raven-ruby

> You marked this topic or exercise as completed.